

BUMMER CAMP

by ANN GARVIN

“Two sisters scramble to save their family’s legacy in a funny, huge-hearted novel about grandiose plans and summers to remember by the author of I Thought You Said This Would Work.
a Good Morning America recommended book.

When Ann Garvin writes a new novel, she not only wins devoted readers, she earns throngs of new friends. Honest, endearing and unabashedly fun, Garvin has a special gift for writing about women who do too much in a world that asks too much from them, and readers find Garvin’s characters to be genuine and utterly relatable.

Good Morning America says it best, “Ann Garvin writes brilliantly about women.” And Six-Million readers on X (formerly known as Twitter) when her writing went viral agree that Ann Garvin is the voice of the mid-life single woman protagonist.

Library Journal says Garvin is laugh-out-loud funny,” and Booklist said about THERE’S NO COMING BACK FROM THIS, “Garvin’s novel is funny, frank, and heartfelt to its core.”

Fans of Nora Ephron, Maria Semple, Dolly Alderton, and Laura Zigman will relish Ann Garvin’s eagerly anticipated new novel, BUMMER CAMP (Lake Union Publishing; September 1, 2024). When a failed motivational coach takes over a camp for anxious and depressed adults and hires earnest anxious and depressed college students to run it, Cat McCarthy has to save her beloved home even if it means losing everything else in the process.

Cat McCarthy has spent years extricating herself from the family business—an increasingly rundown theater camp and all the drama contained within it. At thirty-eight, she’s putting the final touches on a new life as she renovates her dream cottage and awaits her first child. Does it worry her that the McCarthy legacy is in the hands of her disastrously irresponsible sister, Ginger? Sure. But the camp’s not Cat’s problem anymore.

Then a series of frantic text messages pulls Cat back to center stage. Ginger has handed the reins to a crackpot motivational speaker, Bob Durand, and his scheming wife, Elaine. The couple’s plan to rebrand the camp as a “rehab” for anxious adults has nearly bankrupted the McCarthys. And now the Durands have skipped town days before investors arrive for a fundraising gala that could determine the camp’s future.

As Cat and Ginger wrangle a cast of lovable misfits and underdogs to save the camp, the sisters rediscover the importance of family, belonging, and holding fast to sweet summer memories.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Ann Garvin, PhD, is the USA Today bestselling author of five funny and sad novels, including There’s No Coming Back From this, I Thought You Said This Would Work, I Like You Just Fine When You’re Not Around, The Dog Year, and On Maggie’s Watch. Ann teaches creative writing at Drexel University in their Low- Residence Masters of Fine Arts program and lives in Wisconsin with her anxious and overly protective dog Peanut. She is the founder of the multiple award-winning Tall Poppy Writers and is dedicated to helping authors find readers and vis a versa. Learn more about Ann Garvin at: anngarvin.com

BUMMER CAMP

by Ann Garvin

Lake Union | September 1, 2024 | Contemporary women’s fiction Paperback | $12.49 | ISBN-10#: 1662518560 | 331 pp.

ISBN-13#: 978-1662518560

Kindle eBook | $4.99 | ASIN#: B08XQD4PCK | 300 pp.

Audiobook | $25.19 | ASIN#: B0D153FB8P | 9 hours